Book gives nursing home a boost

A NURSING home has been able to buy a special sensory trolley thanks to bumper sales of a book.

Memories of RAF Witchford was published last winter when Sue Aldridge, from Ely, made her ill husband's dream of having his own book published come true.

Barry, 67, who has Alzheimer's, lives at Soham Lodge Care Centre and Sue decided that the money raised through the sale of the book would be split between the Soham Lodge Residents Fund and the RAF Witchford Display of Memorabilia.

Almost 500 copies have sold in just a few months, including one to the Queen, and the care centre has used the funds so far to purchase a sensory trolley for the benefit of all residents.

Restructure sees ADeC services cut

SOME local arts services provided by leading organisation Arts Development in East Cambridgeshire (ADeC) are to be axed.

Now grant funding for the Ely-based charity is soon to become the responsibility of the City of Ely Council rather than East Cambridgeshire District Council, ADeC says some of its services will be scrapped this month.

Although the organisation says it is "very pleased" to be working with the city council, it also says the changeover is leading to a restructuring.

As reported last week, grant funding for the charity, as well as funding for Ely Museum and ownership of The Maltings, is being transferred to the city council.

Among the ADeC services being axed is the small grants scheme which it currently runs to help out smaller arts organisations.

A spokeswoman for ADeC said: "We are very pleased to be working with the city council, and believe this is in the best long-term interests of ADeC. However, the end of our core arts development funding from the district council means in the short-to-medium-term, our focus will be on the development of our venue-based activities, including Ely Cinema and the Babylon Gallery, and the delivery of high quality arts-based projects.

"Some of our activities, which form a part of our current funding agreement with the district council, including our small grants scheme and the free advice service for groups and individuals wanting to develop arts activities, will come to an end from this April."

The organisation's director, Jane Wilson, is leaving in mid-April and there will soon be two co-directors - Nathan Jones and Caroline Cawley - both of whom are existing staff members.
