Five questions with...

Revive Interior Design's Jessie Marchesseau

Revive Interior Design, located in Meyers near Lake Tahoe's South Shore, offers a variety of services — custom interior design, real estate staging, price-fixed design packages for those needing a little creative direction, and digital solutions.

According to owner/operator Jessie Marchesseau, she's worked in the design industry for most of the last decade and recently started her own business, launching Revive Interior Design in 2016. She's also worked as a licensed Realtor for more than 10 years in the Tahoe region.

"I moved to Tahoe from Montana in 2000, fell in love with the area and never left," she said. "I have a Bachelor's Degree in Interior Design from University of Nevada, Reno, and am an Allied member of the American Society of Interior Designers. I serve Lake Tahoe, Kirkwood, Minden, Gardnerville and the Carson Valley.

"I offer full-service interior design for remodels and furnishing homes, as well as smaller pre-packaged design services such as paint-color consults and in-home design work sessions. I also offer new seasonal packages every few months to give clients an opportunity to freshen up rooms without investing a lot of money."

Regarding design specialties, Marchesseau doesn't like to paint herself into a corner.

"Interior design should be about the personality and lifestyle of the person living in the space, not me as the designer," she said. "I'm open to whatever my clients need and want, and then try to guide them in the best direction accordingly."

Home staging is an enjoyed service for Marchesseau as well.

"As a Realtor for more than a decade, I have a lot of insight into the local real estate market and what buyers are looking for," she explained. "I started staging homes while working in real estate and knew I wanted to continue to do it in my design business. It's one of my favorite services to perform."
